HELLA BRAKE WEAR SENSORS

SAFETY STARTS WITH THE SMALLEST PART

Good to know:

In addition to the brake pads that come with warning contacts, HELLA offers over 240 additional wear sensors. If a brake pad is designed for a warning contact as standard but is delivered without one, we provide the option for customers to install it to ensure safety.

HELLA electronic wear indicators are known for their high heat resistance and excellent insulation.

Good to have:

Essential accessories for all brake system components, including a complete set of fixing screws, are included in the delivery.

IMPORTANT

The condition of the brake system has a significant impact on road safety.

The wear indicator is primarily responsible for monitoring its condition.

Its function and effect should therefore never be underestimated.

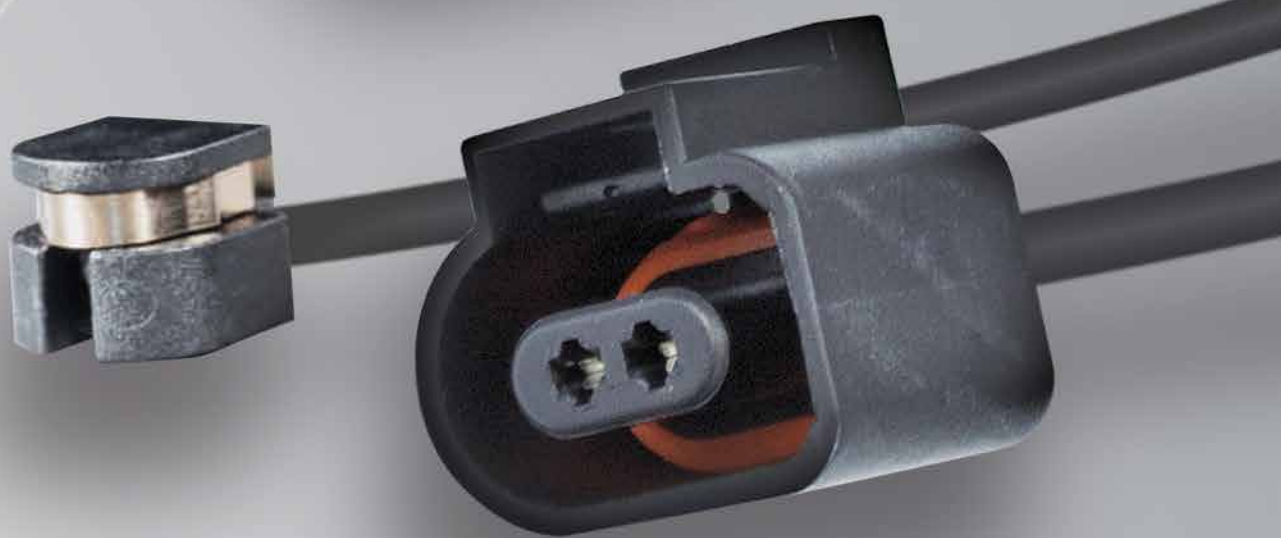

Brake pad wear indicators play a crucial role in ensuring your safety. They ensure that you drive with reliable brakes. Therefore, don't compromise and use only branded accessories from HELLA. These are manufactured according to OE specifications and are made exclusively from high-quality materials, thus guaranteeing maximum safety, durability, and comfort. As the name suggests, wear indicators serve as a control device that indicates when the brake pads are worn. Generally, there are two types of wear indicators – mechanical and electronic:

1. Mechanical wear indicators mounted on the brake pad backing plate generate a loud, vibrating warning sound when the friction material reaches a critical residual thickness.

2. Electronic control systems are embedded in the friction material. When the residual thickness is reached, the braking action cuts the cable, interrupting the electrical circuit and creating a short circuit, which in turn illuminates a warning signal in the speedometer unit.
