PRODUCT FEATURES

HELLA's evolution of rear lamps: 120 years of innovation and brand-specific design

Rear lamps are among the lighting solutions that have evolved the most since the early days of car production. In the first decades, they were relatively small and only served as tail and stop lights to ensure sufficient distance from vehicles behind you. In the course of time, however, many more functions have been added: Reverse lamps, rear direction indicators, rear fog lamps and reflex reflectors.

LED technology has not only drastically reduced the energy consumption of the lamps, it has also created completely new design options, such as a 3D tunnel effect, light curtain, indirect reflectors and glowing body. Rear lamps therefore also have a growing influence on individual vehicle design, not only for passenger cars, but also in the commercial vehicle and agricultural sectors. They can even serve as a distinguishing feature for the relevant brand – a trend that HELLA supports with customised designs and corresponding optical systems.

HELLA has over 120 years of experience in the field of lighting systems and transfers OE competence and parts to the independent aftermarket

Strong lighting competence with HELLA

HELLA has a broad IAM range in OE quality and is the market leader for innovative lighting technologies. Our products for the independent aftermarket have the same quality levels offered in series production. Our headlamps, rear lamps and fog lamps are produced in the same factories. The production lines and machines are also identical. We also apply the same elaborate testing procedures. We have been developing vehicle lighting for more than 120 years and are pioneers in the latest lighting technologies: for example, SSLJHD technology is new from the HELLA name. SSL stands for "Solid State Lighting", which is finding its way onto the independent aftermarket. The technology is based on the principle of miniaturisation. In this video, you can find out what is behind it and how it can increase road safety, as well as all other important information about HELLA's lighting expertise
